

“Upon the road he was always occupied with God.”
“He acquitted himself with great humility and charity.”
“He endured with much patience and with courage.”
“He endured with great patience and charity toward those who ill-treated him.”
“He aided me, notwithstanding the pain of his wounds.”
“On this journey, I was witness to his many virtues.”
“He sought the means to please Him in all things.”
“He gave himself to Him as a sacrifice.”
“He showed an admirable gentleness.”
“Treated so cruelly, he showed a most uncommon patience and gentleness.”
“His memory is still blessed.”
“We consoled each other in the divine arrangement of things; and we were preparing for everything that it might ordain for us.”
